Short description	Employers and employees can agree on a payback clause in a 'Qualification agreement'. Thereby, the employee will work for the employer for an agreed period (no more than 5 years) after completing training to compensate the employer for the training expenses incurred. If an employee decides to terminate the employment before the agreed period, he/she must reimburse the costs of the training (up to 100%). If an employee partly fulfilled his/her commitment to remain in employment for the duration of the agreed period, the amount to be repaid will be reduced proportionately. If the training undertaken by the employee leads to 'deepening' (rather than upgrading) qualification, the agreement may be concluded if the anticipated costs of training amount to at least EUR 1 700. The Labour Code stipulates minimum requirements. Modifications in favour of the employee are subject to negotiations between employee and employer, or to collective agreements.

Operation/management	The agreement on a payback clause needs to be concluded in a 'Qualification agreement'. This document includes the agreed period (no more than 5 years) after completing training to compensate the employer for the training expenses incurred. If an employee decides to terminate the employment before the agreed period, he/she must reimburse the costs of the training (up to 100%). The amount is being reduced over time proportionately. The Labour Code stipulates minimum requirements. Modifications in favour of the employee are subject to negotiations between employee and employer, or to collective agreements.

Source of financing and collection mechanism	Employer funds training, the employee provides (partial) repayment eligible training costs in case of premature departure from the company
Financing formula and allocation mechanisms	An employer may organise and fund the training for the employee, in return, the employee commits to staying in the company for the duration of the agreed period (no more than for 5 years) or (up to 100% of) payback of the associated costs. All the conditions are set in a bilateral agreement between employer and employee. The agreement should specify the type of costs and the total amount the employee shall be obliged to repay. If an employee partly fulfilled his/her commitment to remain in employment for the duration of the agreed period, the amount to be repaid will be reduced proportionately. The amount of funding allocated to cover training costs should be higher than EUR 1 700. However, due to the relatively high costs that would have to be reimbursed, the training may not be compulsory for the employee.
